Easy Access regulation for Higher Professional Education: more options, less administration

The new Easy Access regulation for higher professional education (HBO) came into effect at the beginning of 2021. Under the new arrangement, instructors have more opportunities to use educational resources, not only on Brightspace but also in Teams and other digital environments.

As an instructor, how do you easily comply with the copyright rules?

Acknowledgement of source

For all materials that you use, even if it is your own, please state the source: title, author, publisher, year.

Links

You are always allowed to link to information, on the Internet, in the digital library, etc. The only condition is that the material has been published legally. Linking is easy and free.

Creative Commons material

If you cannot link, use material with a Creative Commons license. You can share this material under certain conditions (see creativecommons.com). Please mention the source and the relevant CC license.

Short extract

The Easy Access regulation for higher professional education (HBO) allows lecturers to copy a maximum of 50 pages from each publication, up to a maximum of 25% of the publication. The AUAS pays an annual buy-out fee for this.

Longer extracts?

Do you want to copy a longer part of a publication? Please contact the Library's copyright team at auteursrecht@hva.nl. The faculty pays a fee per page per student.

Images

The Easy Access regulation for higher professional education (HBO) allows lecturers to use a maximum of 50 images in each course product, a maximum of 25 from one publication and a maximum of 10 per author. If you want to use more images, please ask the publisher for permission in advance or contact the Library's copyright team.

Any questions?
