

PETER, 14 YEARS OLD, HAS AN ADULT LOVER BOY

A 14-year-old boy, Peter, who stayed in the residential group for a while and now lives back home, is still being followed up by his coach from the organisation. Peter's parents do not give him much care and attention. They do not use many kind words, let alone give him a pat on the back or show affection. The habits and common parlance at home are very rough, and often have a sexual slant, under the motto "In our household, we talk about everything out in the open!".

During a visit, the coach notices there is also a 25-year-old man in the room, who joins the conversation with much interest. In due course, Peter sits on the lap of this 25-year-old man and starts to fondle him. The 25-year-old man presents himself as a confidential advisor who helps the boy with his homework, takes the boy out on trips, gives him the chance to talk about his difficult feelings, etc.

It's clear that the man fulfils a lot of Peter's needs. Peter gets attention, affection, interest in his activities, and all the presents the young boy always had to miss.

Little by little the coach hears the family talking about the 25-year-old man being Peter's lover boy, and it turns out that they often sleep together, although they both say they do not have a sexual relationship with each other.
